Speaker 1 (00:00):

People would call us in the middle of the night and they'd say, I have a sinus infection and we'd say, well, why are you calling us? And they'd say, well, number one, you're the only people to answer the phone in the middle of the night. You're the only people who we trust. And three you're the only people who actually care about solving the problem. So we said, well, how do we solve that problem telehealth? So we knew we needed telehealth capability on the flip side Teladoc, which was the clear leader in virtual care. There they'll do about 10 million visits this year. They looked at it and they said, people who are calling a lot of people who call us, don't just call for sinus infection. They call it because they have a chronic condition and boy, wouldn't it be great if we could help them with their chronic condition and do it.

Speaker 1 (00:50):

So they don't only have multiple, multiple pieces of software, multiple applications, multiple coaches. Wouldn't it be great if we can create one place to go, to get an incredible experience of healthcare, which we've never had anywhere in the U S anyway. And so, as we talk, we saw, wow, this is amazing. You're international. We'd like to be international. You're already in 50 countries. There's only 25% overlap of our customer base, what an expansion opportunity. And then we looked at it and we said, there's no product overlap. Everything we do. You don't have every scene. You do. We don't have. And now we stretch from the hospital with their InTouch product to coming to home all the way home to our digital front door. And so we've covered the whole base and we've done that very comprehensively. So it was, it was just, it was an unbelievable fit. I've never seen a fit and I've done a lot of acquisitions. A lot of mergers never seen a fit this good.
